PRESIDENT JOHNSON. HIS INTERVIEW WITH THE CORRESPON DENT OF THE LONDON TIMES.

A Clearer View of the President's Policy The following is the letter of the Wash ington correspondent of the London Times, giving the particulars of an interview with President Johnson. It will be read with great interest both in Europe and America. The Times says, editorially: "We know not whether our sensitive cousins would like to not know what I could desire more than I have this regarded as an appeal to the public opinion of the world, and to the one "flesh and blood" of all nations and realms, but we are assured that the President gave full permission that the details of this remarkable conference should be made public. They do him the greatest honor, and, we think, at harmony and peace, and how gladly ought to satisfy these who suspect him of a | would I give up all! reactionary policy, a personal ambition, an the law." Washington, April 16, 1866.—In the perplexed and uncertain state into which public affairs have fallen, it is impossible for me to send you any information more important or valuable than the particulars of interview which I had with President Johnson at the White House on Thursday last. The President's opinions, especially with reference to the freedmen, have been so wilfully misrepresented in the Radical press of this country, and his general policy towards the Southern States has been exposed so much unjustifiable perversion, that Mr. Johnson's own explanations on both these subjects may have some weight even with those who are most embittered against

The President first adverted to the condition in which he found the country on his accession to office, and pointed out that ever since that time the Radical party, which now has the control over Congress, had been preparing for the issue forced upon him. Their object was manifest, and it was one which, from their point of view, they could scarcely be blamed for pursuing so eagerly. They knew perfectly well that when the South came back into Congress their day of power would be over-the Southern representatives would stand as a unit; they would probably fall into alliance again with the Democratic party, the old issnes of slavery and State sovereignty would be dead and buried, and the party which now ruled would be stripped of its power. Their talk about philanthropy and benevolence to the negro meant nothing more than a desire to work upon the feelings of the North, so that they might be enabled to carry everything their own way. It was a renewal of an old conflict. The two sections of the country were ready to go to war before the rebellion broke out—the one to preserve slavery, the other to destroy it. Each side was willing to acrifice the Government in order to gain its object. The South struck first. The rebellion was subdued at the Southern end of the line, and now it is swinging round to the other end. men," continued the President, and he always used these words to denote the Radica party, "are almost ready to go into rebelagain rather than have their supremacy destroyed by the re-introduction of the South. They know nothing practically of the real state of the South. The very man who had drawn up the Civil Rights Bill, what are his means of judging? I left him in the Senate during the war, and went out to Tennessee and saw it all, and bore my share of the troubles. He stopped at home, and now endeavors to make his theories square into the events of the war, and egislate on ideas which he has never put to

The President then went on to speak o slavery and the negro. He had been brought up, he said, under the very shadow of the institution of slavery. He had bought and owned slaves, but still he had al-ways been for abolishing slavery upon any basis which could be adopted with safety to the country. When it came to the question whether slavery should be abolished or the Government broken up, he never had a doubt as to the course which he cught to pursue; he decided to give up slavery, and ne abided by that decision. But the South MOVEMENT FOR VENEZUELA, SOUTH now would treat the negro with greater kindness than the North if it were let alone and not exasperated. "They talk of justice to the negro," continued the President God knows my heart yearns toward him when I think of the end which these meaare preparing for him. I see that end clear- pany, commenced its organization a few days ly enough—they are going the way for a ago in Richmond by accepting a grant of know how it will fare with the negro. How and constitution. This grant, which was bas such a contest always ended? When the | made to H. M. Price and a number of assotime comes there will be no struggle. The ciates, authorizes the colonization of all varesult will be decided without that. Now, cant lands in Guyaen and Alto Amazonas, then, what do we find? The very thing and confers upon colonists rare privileges of which we said these Southern States could never do-which we fought these four years to prevent them doing—these men affirm that they have actually done-namely, been | President, and the following officers and out of the Union. The Southern States are ready to come back upon our terms, take loyal onths, and acknowledge their allegiance, but these men say they shall not, Why, if they had offered to come back, or any of them, during the rebellion, should we have turned them away on the ground that they had placed themselves out of the Union? Mr. Lincoln offered to receive the whole Legislature of Richmond-a rebel Legislature-and would have welcomed them with open arms. Would be have refused to receive these States now that they save fully submitted?" The President next referred to the misepresentations of his policy which have een so industriously spread abroad. "These men" had for months past had the public mind open to them, and had poured into it whatever they pleased. Now it had become incrusted, as it were; but once let that incrustation be broken through, and the truth would begin to find its way. "I am not dis-couraged," added the President; "either these States must be brought back or they must kept out. It is like doing a sum in adddition some sums want figuring up more than others before you can get the anewer, but I believe it will all come out right

Mr. Johnson then enlarged with considerable detail upon the operation of the Freedmen's Bureau, and said its machinery was now being used to get negroes conveyed from the North back to the South by the very men who were asserting that the lives of the freedmen were not safe in the South. They had hired or bought lands, they company only-and to prevent the paving wanted labor, and they got their negroes transported at the expense of the Government. The Freedmen's Bureau compelled the negroes to go, or they stopped their subistence allowance. It was little better than another form of slavery, only that it was advise any one to forward money for the solely conducted by Abolitionists; for the above purposes, until official assurance is Freedmen's Boreau would not assist a South-ern man in getting negroes from the North, been approved by the National Legislature where many thousands of them have taken refuge during the war. I am like the Tribunes elected by he Roman people—I am to stand and represent their interests. And what other object can I have but to represent those interestsinterests of my country? I have no party objects to serve—no selfish interests to promote. If I were a man of ambition, I do have gained. I have gone the whole giddy round, from alderman upward, and I do not value this office (here the President spoke with great earnestness and feeling) except for the good which it may enable me to do I want but a corner of this house to live in and I do not care a bawbee, as the Scotch say, for all the rest. Let me see the country

"I suppose I may say that I have done enough to satisfy any reasonable ambition unwarrantable disagreement with the Con- and feel that my race is well nigh run gress, and a disposition to override or evade | These men want power. I have enough and am indifferent to what I have. We think "-he said these words with a smile-"we think this a great position, with our ideas-we are educated to do so; but I can assure you that I am often here twelve hour day without it ever occurring to me that I am President." He evidently meant without the pride of power occurring to "These men," he also said, "have raised the cry of 'mad dog' at me, and the people seem to be getting afraid. They will un derstand me better by-and-by, and understand these men, too. I could not expect to get through without a struggle." Yet it was most extraordinary, he continued to think of the course which "these men" were pursuing. By being united again, the country would stand respected in the eyes of the world. It was now laboring under the evils of an inflated currency, and while trade is restricted by the South being kept in uncertainty—an element of danger in the State-such evils could not be corrected. Yet there were signs that the people were beginning to be alive to the truth, "Look at Peoria "-and he mentioned several other towns where meetings in support of the President's policy have lately been held since the passage of the Civil Rights bill. 'It is like water trickling along the ground,' said Mr. Johnson. "You can see the damp places here and there, and you know that it will gradually spread. It will take time; but, after all, what good can b ecomplished without trial and difficulty If I fall, my regret will not be for myself I will hope that some one wiser will rise up to the work."

The President uttered these words in a somewhat weary and sad, but very earnest He continued with great animation :- "My convictions are firm and strong, and strong convictions are a great source the best source—of courage to a man. I fought disunion nearly all around the circle, and if I am called upon to complete the circle I will. Then I could say most heartily that I would that I could depart in peace.'

Such, so far as I feel myself at liberty President. : believe that I have repeated his very words in most instances, but there were many illustrations which he employed which I am unable to recall, and in a conversation of nearly two hours there must ecessarily be a great deal which I cannot oretend to remember with sufficient accura to repeat. That the President is as firm nd unshaken as ever it was impossible to doubt after listening to him. He relies up on the good sense of the people to bring th resent crisis to an end; but it is clear that he has no personal objects to serve. He told one of the most distinguished of American politicians only yesterday, as he told me on Thursday, that he will never consent to be a candidate for the Presidency again. I will only add that the President looked better in health than when I saw him some nonths ago, and that he speaks with great dearness, force, and ability, and brings to bear on the subject upon which he is talking many very suggestive and felicitous figures

The property of the company consists of lease-hold interests in the counties of Overten, Fentress, White, Jackson and Warren, in the Stats of Tennessee, amounting in the aggregate to overeight thousand acres.

The membership of the company and the Board of Directors comprise men of business experience and reputation, and of a thorough and practical acquaintance with the oil mines of Pennsylvania. The mining superintendent was one of the first explorers of the oil fields of that State, and struck the first flowing oil well in the country, well known as the Hequembourg well, and to which the oil interests of Pennsylvania, then in their nascent state, were very largely indebted.

The company will lease portions of their valuable lands, in small tracts, to private parties or companies, for incediate development. THIRD NATIONAL BANK,

MARCHARD TO TENNESSEE—WHITE COUNTY:

The Sewanee Coal Mines IN FUTURE WILL BE WORKED BY THE Tennessee Coal Company. The litigation which has hitherto rendered these Mines of so little value to the public has been settled, and the parties interested now confidently expect to supply Nashville and the other towns in Middle Tennessee with coal. They believe it is only dle Tennessee with coal. They believe it is only necessary for this coal to be tried to be generally used. For manufacturing purposes and for Engines, this coal is believed to be superior to any that can be had in Tennessee. They especially desire that Blacksmiths and all who work in iron, should try this coal. The Company working these Mines feel authorized to say that the people of Nashville may rely upon them for a CERTAIN supply of Coal at all times, and they hope, by being liberally patronized, to reduce the crice of
